Panel Discussion at UT Dallas: Delivering Value Through Managed Innovation

Hosted by The University of Texas at Dallas Center for IT and Management (CITM) and Kalypso

by Kasey Durbin and George Young

Innovation is increasingly becoming the top strategic initiative for many leading organizations. While widely touted as essential for growth, innovation can also be difficult to manage and measure on a consistent basis. On March 22, Kalypso and The University of Texas at Dallas will present a panel discussion on how practitioners can overcome these challenges through a managed innovation process - without stifling innovative spirit.

Our panel of experts will explore:

- The strategic innovation approach, such as reacting (being nimble), anticipating (being prepared) and creating (taking charge)
- Maintaining the balance between the need for process and the agile and fast-moving world of innovation
- How to define and conceptualize measures of innovation, establish benchmarks, justify funding levels, and hold individuals and teams accountable for innovation progress
- The tactical implementation of innovation strategy defined in terms of process, people, and technology
- How operations and the CIO share responsibility for identifying environmental changes and connecting these changes to opportunities

Meet The Panelists

- George Young, founding partner, Kalypso
- Trey Bradley, Executive VP of Technology, Sony
- Ron Brown, CIO of Global R&D, PepsiCo
- Daryl Risinger, Senior VP of Product Development, Concentra
- Moderator: Dennis McCuistion, host for nationally syndicated PBS McCuistion Program and Executive Director, Institute for Excellence in Corporate Governance
