Kirby Sisk is a Character with Character

...because interesting people are more fun to work with

by Kirby Sisk and Reagan Pugh

I was raised in Griffin, Georgia just south of Atlanta, but have become an Atlanta-escapee and now live down on the coast in Savannah. As a rebel son, I defied my University of Georgia research professor father to become a Georgia Tech Yellow Jacket to the core. It took a while, but he and I get along fine now. Newport Harbor and San Francisco Bay converted me into a sailor, windsurfer and sea-kayaker. Nothing is better than a great day of sailing with friends followed by grillin’ and chillin’ on the hook at the end of the day.

To what faults do you feel most indulgent?
Giving into the foodie in me. I love to enjoy a good meal and particularly the desserts. I have a sweet tooth that plays to my downfall as well. In a renovated house with a gourmet kitchen, I cook a lot and probably eat too much there. I especially enjoy eating cake batter and old-fashioned oatmeal cookie dough; both are worth the occasional stomachache.

Who are your favorite heroes of fiction?
I have to go with John Wayne. I still love almost every western he’s in.

What is your greatest fear?
Spiders give me the creeps. I think all of my neighbors are bug-free as well given the strength of the line of death that the pest control company sprays at my house each month!

What is your most treasured possession?
Behind family and friends - my home and sailboat. Both were bought as fixer-uppers and now offer us great ways to spend time with family and friends.

What is your idea of perfect happiness?
Running wing-and-wing home with friends after a great day of fast sailing on a sunny, warm, windy day.
